

Georg Duenstl

Georg is the Chief Scientist Pharmacology at the LEO Science & Technology Hub in Cambridge (USA) and responsible for the management of academia and biotech collaborations, scouting for drug and technology collaboration partners, and identification of seed investment opportunities. He's also a project manager for the LEO Foundation (Denmark) and a mentor for the MIT Sandbox Innovation Fund. Georg holds a MSc in Biology and a PhD in Biochemical Pharmacology from the University of Konstanz (Germany) as well as a Certificate of Professional Development from the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania (USA).